ARMY OFFICERS ARE GETTING ALL FUSSED

The majors and colonels are all in a flurry. The time is rapidly drawing near when they will have to mount their chargers and ride sixty miles over a hard, bumpy road. Just think of it! Of course, the riding does not commence until December, but between now and then the time will pass very rapidly for an army officer of high rank—there is too much doing in the way of good times and receptions. Many of them tremble with awe when the maneuver is mentioned, but what can they do? Teddy Roosevelt was the one to suggest it—but what right has he to think that a well-fed, self-contented army officer wants to charge around at breakneck speed, like himself, slaughtering lions and punching bold, bad bears in the snout? But, then, this new stunt after Roosevelt suggested it was passed upon by the government and made a law, so there is no getting out of it. And then, when you come right down to think of it, there are three days allowed in which to ride the sixty miles. And twenty miles a day is not so bad, so cheer up, you majors and colonels—the worst is yet to come. And the ordeal will soon be "pau."
